Zero Divisors

Abby Bernhardt

25 March 2019

A simple test to see whether a particular element of Zm is a zero divisor would have to start with the element not equal to zero. You would multiply the nonzero element by each of the other nonzero elements in Zm. If the first nonzero element is multiplied by the second (mod m) and equal zero, then those two elements are zero divisors.